

Social Justice Project Award

Due to a generous donation, the Department of Counseling Psychology has created a Charlotte Clara Lehman award up to $1200 each year for an individual or team of students. Students are encouraged to propose a plan for using this fund to complete a Social Justice Project. This project should promote social justice activity for an underserved or underrepresented group. The proposal should identify (a) the intended group/audience, (b) goals/outcome for the social justice project, (c) clear plan for the social justice activities, (d) detailed budget for the funds, (e) partnerships, if any and (f) procedures for documenting the impact on the project. Proposals are encouraged to propose efficient use of the fund by maximizing the impact of the project, to apply psychological theory and research, to focus on a population or group that has been underserved or underrepresented, and to be feasible in being completed within the 12 months of the award. It is not intended for data collection or research costs. A final report of the project should be filed with the department shortly after the end of the project and will be posted on the department's Diversity and Social Justice Committee page. The proposal should be no more than 4 pages, single-spaced including nature of the social justice project, design of the project, budget, and intended outcome of project. The due date for the proposal is January 31.
